POETRY.

From the Southern Literary Messenger.

Summer Nocturne.

By MISS ANNE T. BROWN.

The leaves are still, the breezes fall, Or sing a drowsy number.

And all through the still night day, The golden hours slumber.

The rippling leaves along, Beneath the moon's dim gleaming.

Oh, were the drowsy Summer time, Were made above for dreaming!

Within my open window fans, A slumberous breath of roses.

And in the softly shaded room, A liquid music on the wall.

And all the while, with motion slow, The leafy shadows tremble.

A scene of silence and repose, Of slow and tranquil mood.

A murmur, as of sleeping winds, Upon a sleeping cloud.

And with soft and gentle steps, A luxury Elysian.

And all delights of drowsy thought, Are mingled in my vision.

Oh, chiding voices, wake me not, Nor turn my reason to reason.

For life is mingled work and play, And each must have its season.

And each must have its study, too, The Spring for pleasure's schemeing.

Autumn for the poet's thought, And Summer-time for dreaming.

patch.

JAMES WALSH, Gun Engineer,
7 West Grove St. Charles Hotel.
Richmond, March 21, 1899.—ly

Be Richmond, Virginia, Manufacturers of Piano-Fortes and dealers in Music, and all kinds of Musical Instruments. They warrant their organs of Piano to be as perfectly tuned, and of as good workmanship as those of any other establishment in the country; and that they will be sold upon as good terms. They lay in a stock of Piano to give them a still better purchase, and sell elsewhere, as they believe they can make it to the interest of all to do so, and will leave no pains unattempted to please the tastes of all.

Piano Fortes and other Musical Instruments repaired.

NEW AND INTERESTING—HARRISON
 I secured a beautiful French "Typographical Case" for taking the measure of the hand. I can warrant my hats to fit neatly and easily, and there is no longer any use of complaining of ill fitting hats. All that is needed is to call on James Collins, 100 St. opposite St. Charles Hotel, and you can be accommodated with a good fit at as cheap rates as the market affords. He has in store a large supply of hats and cap suitable to the season, which he will dispose of on the most accommodating terms.
