and it cannot come unless it was pre-de-termined, and of that we seen to indica-tions.

—We must therefore accept war—bitter, relentless, desperate war for another sea-son, unless the military power of treason shall soone be destroyed. There is but one road to Peace, and that is over victorious battle-fields. Treason is still not content. It has surrendered more than half its ter-vitory—that lost every important port—has its armice all shattered but that of Lec-and that is wasting and dispirited by the fearful tide of disaster that has befallen the robel cause; but it will make one more death-struggle, and for that we must be prepared. Let every kiyal man stand firmly by the government, confident that with a just cause and a heroic army, all must soon be well.

—GEN. COPPROTEES, REECUS.

We give in to-day's paper the speech must soon be well.

GEX. COPPROTUS. RECKE.

We give in to-day's paper the speech delivered by Gen. Coffroth in Congross, in explanation of his vote for the resolutions proposing amendments to the Constitution for the abolition of Slavery. As his I vote has been severely criticisch, it is but just to him that he be heard in vindication of his act. During the previous session, when the same resolutions were before Congross, Gen. Coffroth opposed them with considerable carnestness, and voted against them. Now, however, he has seen fit to change his position, and eminearly for the better in our judgment, and we give him the benefit of the widest publicity for his remarks. It was once well said by an old judge to his son, who was about to assume the erimine, that he should decide as he thought just, but to be extremely careful not to give reasons: therefore unnecessarily. This admonition would have been of inestinable value to Gen. Coffroth, if neverted by him. Hitherto he has almost invarily voted wrong, and, when he blandered on the right he gave nearly every possible reason for it but a rational one-lift has set when he cast him each him the chandle when he cast him each had be said when he cast him each had he will be said when he cast him each had he will be said when he cast him each had he will be said when he cast him each had he will be said when he cast him each had he will be said when he cast him each had he will be said when he cast him each had he will be said when he cast him each had he will be been he had he will be said when he cast him each had he will be said when he cast him each had he will be said when he cast him each had he will be said when he cast him each had he will be said when he cast him were her he had hered on the variety of the saveredge people. I he would have been one of onest-teng and in har mony with the inevitable progress of the age.

But Gen. Cofforth vainly endeavors to explain that in voting for the constitute.

We presume that ninety-nine hundred the to this State who have say opision on the majock, believe that Mr. Clay defeated the appointment of Mr. Stevens to the cabinet under Gen-Harrison. Until we perused Mr. Burrows' article, we never doubted it: and knowing as we did that Gen. Harrison land, before the election of 1800, voluntarily tendered Mr. Stevens a place in his cubinet in the event of his election, we stated in a recent article that the real author of Gen. Harrison's violated faith probably sleeps beneath the shades of Ashland. Mr. Clay and Mr. Stevens were never devoted friends. The one was a Mason and the foe of Arti-Masseiny, of which Mr. Stevens was confessedly the life and leader in this State, and contributed more perhaps than any other mason that day, to give vitality and power to that organization in the sevenal States where it was formidable. He was not, therefore, in ayangathy or in co-operation with Mr. Clay, and it is well known that the Anti-Masonic element prevailed in the Harrishang Convention of 1838, and set aside Clay for Harrison. To this end Mr. Stevens and the Harrishang Convention of 1838, and set aside Clay for Harrison. To this end Mr. Webster contributed indirectly. It was in harmony with the Anti-Masons, and when his unimitative could not be composed, his friends naturally joined the triends of Harrison: Mr. Stevens and Mr. Webster were thus contributing to the same end, and the friends of Mr. Stevens approached by Mr. Burrows, the representative of Mr. Stevens, was sentificed.

Mr. Burrows makes, out a very plain test of the sum of the contributed indirectly in the cabinet even before the election. The offer was certifiedy and committed thimself without solicitation to call Mr. Stevens on to the cabinet even before the election. The offer was certifiedy and committed thimself without solicitation to call Mr. Stevens on or feminent fitnes; but some potential two she for fitted by critical to competite the was the Premier of the administration none could have been amone powerful
