Still did our yeathful nation need A.hthur's feetering cire; Its fall'ring feet-rieps, then to lead, Aright in its parser.

Again he gave himself to save,
Fresh vigor to impart;
In war, in years, his people's slave,
Zot monarch of each heart.

Then from the merid, for sweet repose, Mount Vernon's shade he sought; His life flow'd calmiy to its slow; His dectiny was stronght!

They field beneath a lowly mound His honor'd bones to rest; A nation mourns! with grouns recound; A country sore distrest.
