But one rital point of Treason remains, and that is wasting in strength under the tricless energy and unfallering courage of the great leader and soldier of the Army of the Potomac.—They ask for one influence thousand men promptly to enable them to consummate their great work and preserve to us and to posterity the blessings of Free

Let their shattered ranks be tilled, and filled at once. Let every district waste not one day, nor one hour, until it-aquoia is filled. Brave men are not wanting to respond to the call if citizens but do their daty generously in providing for the wants of themselves and their household gods.

moderate evidences M'Ctelian has in the time given of hostility to trenson, with entire unanimity.

Gen. M'Ctellani is a man of blanucless character, of moderate abilities, of faithful impulses, and, if left to himself, would naturally prefer patriotism to treason. He is without achievements in the field or in civil life to make him a Presidential cannidate; and is doubtless to-day manared at the emerurence of circumstances that has made him the leader of a great party, in a most momentum political struggle. That he is to be the instrument of others, if called to the Presidential chair, rather than the leader of an administration, is pulpable from the notrious fact that the men who nominated him first adopted a platform directly confronting every public profession he has ever made touching the vital issues to be decided at the next election. If he were, a leader—a hold, able matchless leader—a hold, able matchless leader—a hold, able matchless leader—a hold, able matchless leader—a leader—a hold, able matchless leader—a hold and controlled by

Vallandighams and Woods would have presented him for the Presidency in the face of hisrocent deforation at West Point. that treason must be suppressed by force of arms or the government surrendered; but they have centured to assume that he will stultify himself; that he will be pliable but they have ventured to assume that he will strillight in-self that he will be plable and therefore most useful in their hands; and it is now for him to determine whether shad with a traintor, or he lose a nomination proffered with the condition, of pertily to himself, to his noble aring, to his country.

The writer hereof is of those who have ever judged. Gen. M'Clellan kindly, and who would greatly prefer to speak well of him to-day that to condemn him. When in command we have ever sustained him: and when deprived of his command-air tonumand we have ever sustained him: and when deprived of his command-air hough painfully convinced of the justice that made it inexomble, we hoped and urged that he should be called to some position in active service suited to his rail, and conceded military abilities as an organizing and defensive ofhers. Not withestanding the cloud of trigothery that fastened its fatal grasp quoghin at an early day, and imperceptibly midde him his con much is country 50c, he never survindered the paramount claims of the government to assert its inherent power to live; and when he manfully re-asserted the doctring of the parties at Neel Foint in a reveal speech—selectaing that these was no remediated. when he manfully reassected the dictrine of the partie at West 15mir in a recent speech—declaring that there was no rem-edy for rebellion but was until traitors submit to largiful authority was repicted that he seemed equal to the great task of defying the traitors who diogenetations to basked in his fune, appropriated his power, and hoped to make him the great suicide of our National Freedom.

—The day of trial has now come, and he and hoped to make him the great snigide of our National Freedom.

The day of trial has now come, and hestands before the country dwarfed and shorn of his only strength—and about to how in humble submission to the leaders who have readvest at Chieppen that his declarations in behalf of the maintenance of the government were but retheoried false-hoods, and that his sanguinary battles were but remove-less battle-theories of a brave but injured foe. When a platform was first made declaring the war a "falling" and demanding an "immediate cessation of hostilities," just when Sherman was entering Atlanta with his victorious army; when Fort Morgan was just suircudering the Mobile Bay to Farragitu, and when Grant is steadily but surely advancing to the very vitabof trenson in its last stronghold, we field that it was a sad, sad day for our boasted American Nationality; but when Cort Morgan has just and so day for our beasted American Nationality; but when Cort Morgan for the residency by neclaration, who that had a latent space for particistics could fail to feel that any other than a faithless, tread-or me me woods spurk such early so me me hor people where their sympthy of me me hoopedly echicated heat year, and me and for me me hoopedly echicated heat year, and me and me and me of me me hoopedly echicated heat of me me hoopedly echicated heat year. ons man would sputh such a nonlination and hard from him the proffered embrace of near who openly declare their sympathy with the releatless numberess of our brary sons and brothers, and the free-boster, and vanidals who sack and burn our houses and spread withering desolation through out the land.

and varieties who sack and burn out nourse, and spread white-ting desolation throughout the land.

Such is the path, such the daties, chosen by the Chicago Convention for General MyClellan, and he books to their bidding. He has already spoken in responses and ventures grateful acknowledgements for the honor conferred upon him, but without so much as a fielder almsion to the peril of the great Nation to whose chief office he now formally aspires. Thus sur, consider of the great Nation to whose chief office he now formally aspires.
